FOR SALE

EXPERIENCED
PROFESSIONAL

customers see our logo or hear our Company name, I guarantee it's their experience with you in their home that comes to mind. How will they recall that experience?

The old saying that attitude is everything could have been written specifically with salespeople in mind. The wrong attitude is a buzzkill when dealing with customers. However, a winning attitude can't be put on like a hat when you walk into an appointment; it must be cultivated on an ongoing basis and be part of who you are. A few lucky souls come by it naturally, but if you aren't one of them, the good news is it can be learned and developed.

Confidence and enthusiasm go hand-in-hand and should go without saying. Confidence, which is not the same as arrogance, goes beyond being self-assured. You need to convey confidence to sell yourself and your belief in and enthusiasm about the Company and the products you are presenting. If you can't ratchet up genuine enthusiasm for what you're asking your prospect to spend his or her hard-earned money on, you're going to get skewed. If you aren't confident and stoked, your customers won't be either, and they won't buy.

The other side of the confidence coin is that you must instill it in your customers. Confidence and enthusiasm along with your inflection and tone of voice create a voice of authority that inspires respect and trust. In other words, make your presentation from a position of strength rather than uncertainty or fear. YOU are the insurance professional!

Being friendly with your prospects should also go without saying. Laptop on Demand says to talk to them the same way as you'd talk to your next door neighbor. It should feel comfortable, flow easily, and progress effortlessly ... as conversations do between friends. And remember that an important part of friendly conversation is listening. Successful salespeople will tell you that if you listen, they'll tell you everything you need to know to make the sale.

But you know, none of those things — or commitment, persistence, determination and accountability — are possible if you fail to command your own thoughts and emotions. Your subconscious mind, which I affectionately refer to as the voices in my head, never shuts off. It's constantly analyzing the data you feed it. Feed it positive thoughts and emotions and it will respond positively; feed it negative thoughts and emotions and it will respond negatively. Garbage in, garbage out. This is why you need to discipline your thoughts and emotions. Allow yourself to indulge in negativity and you'll be your own worst enemy. Salespeople who crash and burn usually do so because they allowed their subconscious programming to create a corrupted attitude.

You represent a great Company selling quality products. Make sure you're not missing out on sales by selling yourself short. ☘

SALES ARE CONTINGENT UPON THE ATTITUDE OF THE SALESMAN, NOT THE ATTITUDE OF THE PROSPECT.
— W. CLEMENT STONE

AS IT SAYS IN THE ESTABLISHING Rapport section of Laptop on Demand supplemental online training — which, by the way, is being completely redone at this very moment — “Clients buy you first, then AIL, then the product.” The Needs-Based Presentation does a great job of presenting AIL and our products. My question to you is: “How are you selling yourself?”

You are the face of AIL to your customers. They may have occasion to contact Customer Service online or by phone, but when your

CONNECTIVITY

Susan Fuldauer

Public Relations Field Operations

SOME PEOPLE ARE CALLED ON TO step into existing landscapes. Others are called to create and build new horizons. Together, we are taking the existing landscape and building and creating something awesome. Together we are making great things happen. What we do is special and relevant to the needs of our communities. Understanding how unique we are with the relationships we create with working families and within our communities is vital to keeping all those relationships, especially our cornerstone labor relationships, strong.

I recently had the opportunity to be with one of our PR Reps as she was honored by her local labor council. Her recognition award represents just one example of the work your PR team does day in and day out. We've had many of the PR team honored by labor and their communities for their steadfast support of working families and the groups with which we partner. From meetings with labor leaders and group members to walking picket lines or giving our voice to public policies that support working families or protesting ones that need to be changed, your PR team builds a partnership that works for all of us.

On any given day, Team PR is meeting with labor leaders, CEOs of credit unions, Executive Board members of our groups, and elected officials. You will find our PR team standing on a picket line or delivering a Basket of Hope for families in need. We work closely with our groups to build the relationships that ultimately provide places for our agency force to go.

Your Public Relations team is the connector with our groups, providing a path for us to build and create our Legacy. PR and the agency force work together to build on the labor and community involvement to create our new horizon.

We are a uniquely gifted company, different from other insurance companies. Our culture of connecting with working families through our group partnerships and our Child Safe leads, is special. We really are a part of something greater than any one of us individually. It is this connectivity that makes us strong, relevant to our communities and unstoppable in our growth.

When a lead is developed by Team PR and placed with an agent, it is not just a place to go, it represents who we are as a company, connecting our core values to our communities. Behind every PR lead generated is relationship building second to none, developing partnerships that move us from a vendor to a partner with our groups.

On occasion, we are honored by our partners for the work we do, but we'd do the work without the public accolades and acknowledgements. We understand what we do is appreciated and we are privileged to be of service for our groups and the members at whose kitchen tables we sit. Whether we get the public recognition or not, we do what we do best, understanding the important role we play for our groups, their members and our communities.

Together, we build horizons bigger than any of us as individuals, making a difference together as one company. 🍷

SGAs EXCEED DONATION GOAL IN CABO

American Income and National Income Life's SGAs, in Los Cabos for their spring meeting, raised $30,000 — double their goal — for Casa Hogar. The original goal of $15,000 was set to raise funds for Casa Hogar to build a playground for the children in residence. President Steve Greer presented the donation to Jayson Stirrup, Executive Director of the organization.

On Friday, April 7, fifteen volunteers (spouses and guests) spent a few hours at Casa Hogar loving on the kids.

We are long-time supporters of Casa Hogar; they were our first partner organization when Closer to the Heart was established in 2012. Casa Hogar is a home for about 40 boys and girls between the ages of 3-17. They are funded entirely by private donations and get no government support. They provide a safe, family-like environment that stresses education and prepares the children to lead productive lives. The staff serves in a parental capacity, performing the roles of tutors, cooks, activities management, drivers, cleaning and administration.

We're hoping to receive updates once the playground project is underway. According to Jayson, the excess funds will be used for electricity, groceries and fuel, Casa Hogar's largest recurring expenses.

Have you achieved MORE THAN 1/4 of your 2017 goals?

David Zophin
Executive Vice President/
Assistant to the President

GOAL SETTING IS A PERENNIALY hot topic at the beginning of every New Year. Could it be that you hear and read about it so often because it's a subject that is easy to know about and difficult to practice?

It would be surprising to find an adult in today's work force who has not heard about goal setting. A Harvard study of their graduates over thirty years found that there was only a small percentage (3%) who actually wrote down their goals — and these were the most successful! You can be certain that every one of those students had repeatedly heard the value of goal setting, yet only 3% actually wrote down their goals consistently. Imagine what you can do if you write down your goals and focus on them consistently until they are accomplished!

The year is more than 1/4 over. So, if you aren't more than 1/4 of the way to your 2017 goals, take a deep breath, put the year to date in perspective, and make sure you have a solid plan to execute and exceed your goals for this year.

What causes what I call the "New Year's Resolution Syndrome?" You know the one I'm thinking of: people make resolutions, work hard at them for a few weeks or months then forget them. Next year, they make the same resolutions! It is self-defeating and self-sabotaging. So why do so many people do it?

They may be making goals that are too global, too extensive, and too unrealistic in some way. That is not to say that they are not worthy goals; they just need to be broken into smaller, more specific, attainable pieces. The elephant analogy is still the best one I know to illustrate good goal setting: "How do you eat an elephant? One spoon at a time." Make spoon-size goals to accomplish them easily. One you've mastered this, get a bigger spoon!

You may have too many people in your life who consciously or subconsciously are unwilling or unable to support you as you reach for your goals. We each have a group of people in our circle who have varied levels of impact on our lives. They may have minimal impact in some cases, but that doesn't stop them from having no shortage of input or opinions about what we do. We can refer to these people as our "tribe."

You have created an agreement among tribe members that you are a certain way and do certain things. They are comfortable with you as long as you are that way and do those things. They may be enthusiastic about your desire to change or accomplish something new. But as you change and accomplish, they may not like it. They may even go so far as to put you down in small ways or make light of your accomplishments. That's usually because your changes and accomplishments remind them, on some level, they could be doing it, too ... and they aren't! So surround yourself with people who want you to have what you want for yourself. Be mutually supportive and you'll all achieve your highest goals.

You may have filled your schedule with so many things that there is little room for your goals to grow. We must be careful not to confuse busyness with progress. Be selective about how you use your time and what you focus on. Success often comes when you know what to leave out, rather than what to include in your life. Notice, too, how much time you spend on trivia. It has a nasty way of taking your attention from what you want to focus on, doesn't it? Have you ever just "had" to clean your office before you could begin your project? Then you know how this works!

Goal setting is like the pig and chicken that were out for a walk in town early one morning. The chicken became really excited when she saw a sign that said "Ham & Eggs, $2.99." She said to the pig, "Look, we've got double billing again." The pig grunted and said, "That's all right for you to say. For you, it's all in a day's work. For me, it's total commitment."

Goal setting is all in a day's work. Goal achievement is total commitment. 🐷
